

Cottage in the Court

Teri Speight, Author, Speaker, Freelance Writer is the author of Black Flora, Inspiring Profiles of Floriculture's New Vanguard (Timber Press). She is also the co-author of The Urban Garden: 101 Ways to Grow Food and Beauty in the City (Quarto). Her words have been quoted in the NY Times, Martha Stewart, Washington Post, and other well know publications. From childhood, Teri has always had her hands in the soils of Washington, DC and beyond. The garden is where Teri finds healing, calm in difficult times, and peace. Her goal is to share the love of gardening and also reconnect others to the soil.

African Americans have had quite the journey embracing the earth from the familiar to the unfamiliar soils of a new land. Over time, we have learned to use our genetic remembrance to cultivate new ways to incorporate culture in our gardens.

Follow her: @cottageinthecourt.bsk.social, Pinterest, and @cottageincourt on IG, and <http://cottageinthecourt.com>

Black Flora is available at bookstores, Amazon, Bookshop.org, etc.

